

NEWS

Nevada Gaming Control Board hits AA Gaming with fine, loss of license

by Carson Now Editor

Monday, March 26, 2012 - 2:59pm

AA Gaming Inc., and its owner Alan Adams, negotiated a settlement in February with the Nevada Gaming Control Board that will result in a $2,000 fine and the loss of the company's unrestricted gaming license.

AA Gaming was issued a license in 2008 to operate slot machines in Doppelganger's in downtown Carson City. AA Gaming continued to operate the slot machines after the bar reopened as High Sierra Brewery under new owner Jim Phalan. Adams continues to own the building.

Adams also formerly owned half of the Carson Nugget Casino until it was purchased by the Mae Adams Trust.

The GCB accused AA Gaming and Adams of failing to file reports about personnel changes at the business, and not responding to repeated inquiries from GCB.

The settlement agreement is below:

© 2025 Carson Now

Powered by Newspack